Task 6: Reading Comprehension Read the story. Then answer the questions. Circle the correct answers.

David was going on vacation for the first time this year! He had planned the trip for months, and finally the time had come. First, he flew from Paris to a small island near Italy on a very small airplane. There were only eighteen seats for passengers, two for the pilots, and one for the flight attendant. All the passenger seats were economy class, but they were bigger than on a normal plane that seats more than one hundred people. It was very nice. David had checked his large suitcase, but he carried his laptop in a briefcase onto the plane. He had planned to play games or watch a movie on his laptop, but the pilot asked the passengers to keep their seat belts on during the flight because it was windy outside. So David couldn't get up to get his laptop. "That's ok," he had thought to himself. He had a window seat! But not only was it windy, it was also cloudy! If it hadn't been cloudy, he would have been able to see the water under them. But he couldn't, so he slept.

Finally, the plane landed on the island. David picked up his suitcase at the baggage claim and walked to customs. He gave his passport to the customs officer, who asked David why he came to the island. David said he wanted to enjoy the beach. The officer didn't smile. "Good luck," he said to David. "It's been raining all week."

David smiled back. "Don't worry! It will be sunny tomorrow because I'm here!"
